

What is causing my plumeria to get red edged leaves?

The most common problem plumeria owners are having these days are the red edge droopy leaves that look like this. It is caused by a very small green bug called leafhoppers. They are usually under the leaves and if you swat your leaves you will see them jump off. They return every year. The solution is to use this product shown below. It is what we have had success with in fighting these bugs.
